THE MALDIVES

The famous explorer Marco Polo called the Maldives "Flower of the Indies" while the great traveler Ibn Batuta referred to her as "one of the wonders of the world".

Geography

The archipelago is 823 km long from North to South and 130 km at its greatest width. Any of the 1192 islands that are spread over 26 natural atolls exceed a length of 4.5 miles or an altitude of 6 feet above sea level. No more than 202 islands are inhabited. The rest includes 87 tourist resorts and uninhabited islands, some of which are used for drying fish or other agricultural activities.

A Brief History

While the early history of the Maldives is obscure, Maldivian legend has it that a Sinhalese prince - Koimale - was stranded with his bride - daughter of the king of Sri Lanka - in a Maldivian lagoon and stayed on to rule as the first sultan.

Over the centuries, the islands have been visited and their development influenced by sailors from countries on the Arabian Sea and the Indian Ocean littorals.

Mopla pirates from the Malabar Coast – present day Kerala - harassed the islands. In the 16th century, the Portuguese ruled the islands for 15 years (1558-1573) before being driven away by the warrior-patriot Muhammad Thakurufar Al-Azam.

Though governed as an independent Islamic sultanate for most of its history from 1153 to 1968, Maldives was a British protectorate from 1887 until 25th July 1965. The British government promised the Maldives military protection and non-interference in local administration in exchange for an annual tribute paid by the Maldives. In 1957 the British established a RAF base in the strategic southernmost atoll of Addu for £ 2000.00 a year.

Following independence from Britain in 1965, the sultanate continued to operate for another 3 years. On 11th November 1968, it was abolished and replaced by a republic and the country assumed its present name.

The People

The origins of "Dhivehin" (Maldivians), are shrouded in mystery. The first settlers may well have been from Sri Lanka and Southern India followed by, as some findings suggest, Aryans from Lothal in the Indus Valley about 4000 years ago. Not surprisingly, the faces of today's Maldivian display the features of various faces that inhabit the lands around the Indian Ocean shipping and maritime routes, the Maldives has long been a melting pot for African, Arab and South East Asian mariners.

Climate

The south-west monsoon or "hulhangu" from May to September is the wet season. Rough seas and strong winds are common during this period. The north-east monsoon "iruvai" falls between December to April. This is a period of clear skies, lower humidity and very little rain. The Maldives is in the equatorial belt and therefore severe storms and cyclones are extremely rare events.

Language and Script

The language of the Maldivians is Dhivehi, a language which is placed in the Indo-Indian group of languages. Dhivehi with its roots in Sanskrit and according to some researchers Elu, an ancient form of Sinhala (spoken in Sri Lanka) is strongly influenced by the major languages of the region. The language has been influenced heavily from Arabic since the advent of the Islam in 1153.

The Maldivian script known as Thaana was invented during the 16th century soon after the country was liberated from Portuguese rule. Unlike former scripts, Thaana is written from right to left. This was devised to accommodate Arabic words that are frequently used in Dhivehi. There are 24 letters in the Thaana alphabet.

THE GREEN PAGE

Global warming and rising sea levels have been of particular concern to the Maldives. To help us protect the fragile environment of the island, we urge you to follow these guidelines.

Please refrain from walking on corals for your own safety and to avoid harming the delicate reef system which protects the island and to preserve it for our future guests to enjoy its splendor.

Please do not catch fish either from the lagoon or the house reef. For the fishing enthusiasts, the hotel provides Sunrise Fishing upon request. Please refer to excursion page No. 9 for details.

Please do not pick shells and corals, either dead or alive. Maldives customs will confiscate such items at Male' Airport.

We recommend any empty spray cans and used batteries be brought back with you for disposal, as these items are harmful to the environment and are not recyclable on the island.

In order to maintain a self-sustaining operation, the following infrastructure has been implemented for your convenience.

Water

All tap water in Mirihi is sourced from the sea and desalinated by reverse osmosis. It is perfectly safe brushing teeth but we recommend bottled water for drinking.

Electricity

Generated by 3 x 350 kva diesel generators with an output of 230 V – 50 Hz.

Sewerage

Sewerage is biologically treated on the island.

Fumigation

In an effort to keep the environment relatively insect-free, non toxic sprays are used on the island on a weekly basis. We apologize for any inconvenience this may cause.

Being a small island with almost 200 people at peak capacity (guests and staff), a significant load is imposed on the above mentioned systems. We would greatly appreciate your cooperation by practicing the following.

- Switch off lighting and air conditioning units when not needed
- Conserve water by turning off taps when using soap or brushing your teeth
- Place towels you wish to have replaced into the basket/bag provided in your bathroom
